

Maximizing Value from their Tech Investment

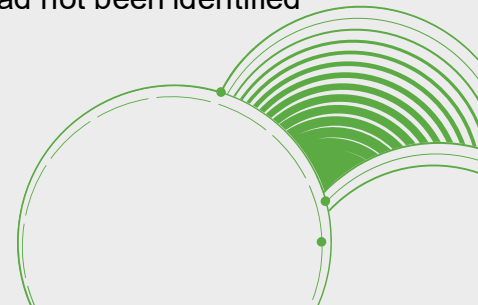

There is a lot of incredible technology out there, but to extract the most value from your tech investments you need the right talent. That talent (or lack thereof) must understand the needs of the business, deploy, configure and operate the tech to meet those needs, and still do their day-job. A year after deploying the Spirion platform, this investment management firm simply didn't have the resources to optimize the platform and maximize the value of their tech investment.

Continue reading to understand what they did about it...

THE CHALLENGE

- Organization lacked dedicated resources to perform data classification and discovery activities
- Spirion was deployed, but the robust reporting capabilities were not utilized
- A majority of the customer's endpoint devices did not have the Spirion agent installed
- Sensitive data was not tagged or identified within the customer's asset inventories
- Misuse or loss of data needed to be identified and remediated
- Repositories containing sensitive information had not been identified

THE SOLUTION

Created three (3) in-scope business processes in the Spirion Data Platform

Updated DLP rules and policies in additional data protection tools to look for sensitive data tagged by Spirion

Fully utilized the reporting capabilities within the Spirion Data Platform to develop and automate the delivery of reports to data and asset owners

Enhanced global data types and classifications to align with in-scope and prioritized PII data elements

Worked with business leaders and teams to identify assets storing personal information

Tested, tuned, and deployed scan playbooks to properly identify and take action on unauthorized storage of PII

Key Benefits of the Spirion & Cloudrise Partnership
